

Rights of the Child

Kindy Korner acknowledges that all children need a safe and secure environment that challenges and stimulates them. An environment that allows for discovery, reflection, and experimentation. Children need space to discover, learn and to fail. It needs to be theirs, where they can form relationships, resolve conflicts, make mistakes, feel safe and have their voices heard.

Learning through play

Kindy Korner acknowledges the importance of play based learning, in which children can spend time developing dispositions of learning through imagination, experimentation, exploration, curiosity and risk-taking. We encourage children to take pleasure in their natural environment filled with fun, happiness, and laughter.

Art and Craft

Art and craft are embedded daily as children express themselves freely through their artwork. Children express their thoughts, feelings and interests by utilising craft materials and always having access to these. Craft stations are set up appropriately and accessible in both indoor and outdoor environment. Educators encourage children to be creative and try new ideas.

Sensory exploration

Kindy Korner incorporates sensory play and Science daily. The children learn through exploration, problem solving and creativity. The children's natural curiosity is utilised to set up investigative play spaces where children can experiment and explore. Through this, the educators support the children's learning and development by creating engaged learners and allow them to hypothesis and make conclusions.
